

RUSH LOADING OF AIRPLANES FOR USE OF THE LOYALISTS

Try to Complete Loading Before Congress Enacts Emergency Legislation

A CARGO OF $2,770,000

Ship Will Sail Unless Law Is Enacted Today, It Is Stated

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—A grim race shot through with the stark drama of war, waged today by the Spanish loyalist government against time and the United States Congress. Gambling against a few hours, the Spanish Government stacked $2,770,000,000 in a desperate effort to speed huge reinforcements of aircraft, arms and ammunition to Spain before Congress can approve emergency legislation to halt their export.

The stevedores worked throughout the night in North Harbor loading over $2,770,000 in crated airplanes aboard the Spanish freighter Mar Cantabrico, for the loyalist forces at Bilbao.

Unless Congress can whip through an emergency resolution today, outlawing export of arms to either side with its 1000 cases of planes, engines and spare parts, it will leave for Spain unmolested. There was a bare possibility the joint resolution, making the neutrality act applicable to the Spanish civil war, might be approved immediately by unanimous action.

Coast Guard boats are ready to follow the S. S. Mar Cantabrico to the three-mile limit and convey it back to port should Congress act before it leaves American waters.

$20,000 BUILDING PROJECT UNDER WAY IN PERKASIE

Converting Hardware Store Into a Modern Apartment Building

NEED FOR DWELLINGS

PERKASIE, Jan. 6.—A twenty thousand dollar building project was begun last week when contractors started work on the conversion of the former Thompson hardware store on Chestnut street, near Seventh, into a modern apartment house. The building, a brick and concrete structure, 30 by 80 feet, with two stories and basement, has been unoccupied several years. The Perkasio Building and Loan Association, mortgagors, took title to the building shortly after the Thompson hardware store was discontinued. Later the building was leased to the Kahn & Snyder hardware firm, which vacated three years ago.

With the acute need for dwellings in Perkasio the building and loan association decided to convert the building into an apartment house. The plans provide for a complete renovation of the interior of the building providing seven apartments of varying size. The largest will contain six rooms and the smallest, three rooms. All will be equipped with modern conveniences, including bath and gas ranges. While refrigeration is not included in the original plans that feature too is being considered by the owners.

The original floors in the building are maple. These will be refinished throughout and additional windows will be installed to provide excellent lighting facilities in every apartment. An automatic oil burning heating plant will be installed in the basement.

The adjoining lot has been purchased to provide additional space for a yard and to provide better entrance to the rear, where there is ample room for garages. Although this is not embodied in the contract, it will quite likely follow at an early date.

The terms of the contract provide that the building shall be ready for occupancy by April 1st.

REFUSES TO BAN MARRIED TEACHERS AT DOYLESTOWN

School Board Declines to Discharge Married Teachers Off the Faculty

JEALOUSY IS BLAMED

Report Says Married Male Teachers Wanted Ruling From Board

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 6.—Doylestown school board in session yesterday refused to discharge married teachers on the faculty after the proposition had been presented to them indirectly. It is reported, by married male teachers who wanted a ruling of the board.

"So long as a married woman is a good teacher it is none of our business whether she is married or single," declared William H. Satterthwaite, president of the board at its meeting. "The school is for the children and if we go on record as demanding a resignation once a teacher marries it will compel us to bind ourselves to a hard-and-fast rule." "Jealousy," was how the board's president described feeling of the male members of the faculty, cryptically.

Frank Mitch, another member of the board, opposes married female teachers on the faculty, but other members agree with President Satterthwaite, including his law partner, Wesley Bunting, and Mrs. George W. Kerr, the only woman on the board.

There are four married women on the faculty of the Doylestown schools and the board refused yesterday to fire them. The local board's ruling in favor of the married teachers, it is rumored will hustle along several prospective brides-to-be.

KNOW YOUR STATE

Our Daily Bread
(Prepared for The Courier by F. A. Pitkin, Director, State Planning Board)

Pennsylvania's citizens receive the essentials of life in four different ways. Some work for a living to support themselves and others. Some (many of whom also work at home but are not paid in cash) are dependent upon their working relatives for support. Some own investments or real estate from which they get enough interest or rent to enable them to live. Others because of inability to find work, or because of physical or mental ailment or other misfortune, must depend upon public relief or private charity.

One of Pennsylvania's biggest present problems is to find useful ways in which the million or more men, women, and young people now out of work can again become self-supporting citizens.

Four out of ten Pennsylvanians are classed as workers—when work is available. In 1930, over 3,700,000 were "engaged in gainful occupation." By far the greatest number (38.1 per cent) were manufacturing and mechanical workers, employed in such places as steel mills, machine shops, repair shops, silk mills, clothing and knit goods factories, tobacco factories, and bakeries. About one-eighth were engaged in trade; selling food, clothing, automobiles, furniture, drugs, hardware, and everything else that the public needs and buys. Nine per cent were working as maids, cooks, gardeners, chauffeurs, and in other domestic or personal service; while nearly the same number were employed in offices as clerks, stenographers, secretaries and bookkeepers.

Next in number were those employed by railroads, bus and trolley companies, and telephone and telegraph companies. These were 8.6 per cent of the total. Pennsylvania has a large number of miners, making up 8.1 per cent of all her workers in 1930, even though employment at the mines has dropped off in recent years.

The next group (6.8 per cent) were those earning their living on farms, including a few woodsmen and fishermen. The remaining 8.2 per cent were either in professional fields, such as law, medicine, or teaching, or they were in the service of the Federal, State, or local governments.

These figures, when compared with those of previous years, show that the number of persons engaged in producing things is growing smaller all the time. Ninety per cent of workers are employed by others, who pay them wages in exchange for their labor.

GRADUATION EXERCISES

Graduation exercises filled much space in the news columns of The Bristol Courier during the month of last June. Two veteran teachers retired at George School, Newtown. June's review of news follows:

1st—Bristol borough school board, through its property committee, announced that a new fence would be placed around the high school grounds. The mesh fence, seven feet high, with barb-wire along the top, it was believed, would aid in protecting school property.

2nd—Andalusia Boy Scout Troop took the lead in advancement for the Lower Bucks District, according to the report of Scout Executive William F. Livermore, given at the quarterly district board dinner here. Bristol's No. 1 troop was a close second.

Morrisville school tax rate for 1936-37 was set the same as the previous year, 25 mills on real estate assessment and $3 per capita.

Nineteen girls, including two from Bristol, graduated from St. Mary's school, Burlington, N. J.

Bensalem Township high school graduated 50 students at its 12th commencement exercises. Dr. Calvin O. Althouse, Philadelphia, was the speaker.

3rd—The graduates at Yardley high school totaled 20.

Greetings were received by the borough of Bristol, through Burgess Clifford L. Anderson, from the city of Bristol, England, such arriving on the giant new liner "Queen Mary" on its maiden voyage.

Two students of the eighth grade, Bristol public schools, received American Legion medals for courage, scholarship, character, companionship, at a special assembly at the high school. Recipients were Doris Sutton and Morris Carter.

4th—Crops in the county were suffering from lack of rain. Many farmers planned to replace timothy with soy beans, so as to get a crop.

Herbert Nysee, Edgely, was exonerated of all blame for the automobile accident which resulted in the death of Frank Figura, Penns Manor, on May 17th.

5th—"Uncle Dan" Beard, always friend and leader of Boy Scouts, was the honor guest at the dinner of Boy Scout Troop 2, Doylestown, and later attended the Scout celebration at Bowman's Hill.

5th—Announcement was made that two veteran teachers at George School, Newtown, would retire. They were George H. Nutt, who served 43 years since the founding of the school on November 6, 1893, and Miss Anne Russell who completed 37 years there.

Three Philadelphia men were arrested when a probe was started on a charge of watering butter. An owner of a Bucks County creamery, John R. Rosenberger, Haycock Township, accused two Philadelphia men of posing as state agents, inducing him to make illegal products and then blackmailing him into paying them money each week.

6th—Lawrence Devlin, South Langhorne, aged 27, was killed while en route from his place of employment to his home. He was struck by an automobile as he traversed the Lincoln highway, South Langhorne. Devlin left a wife and three small children.

TURN THREE PRISONERS OVER TO N. J. POLICE

Robberies in Trenton, Hamilton Twp., and Hold-Ups in Bucks Marked Solved

OFFICERS CO-OPERATING

The four men held in custody, three here and one in Trenton, charged with being implicated in a number of hold-ups and robberies, both in Trenton and in Bucks County, were grilled practically all day yesterday at police headquarters, here. Bucks County Detective Anthony Russo, State Police from Doylestown, Chief Albert Cooper, Morrisville, and Trenton detectives, were all working on the case.

Late yesterday afternoon after a conference among the officers, the Trenton authorities and District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, it was decided to turn the three held here, over to the Trenton officers. This will make it possible to prosecute all four for crimes which they are alleged to have committed in Trenton and in Hamilton Township.

Detainers will be filed against the four for crimes allegedly committed in Bucks County and the four will be brought back into Bucks County after they have fulfilled the demands of the law in New Jersey.

It was through the close co-operation of all of the authorities that the four men were apprehended and the series of robberies and hold-ups of which they are accused, solved.

Justice of the Peace James Laughlin gave all except Knapp a hearing and then turned them over to the Trenton police. It was stated that Justice of Peace Neal Nolan, Morrisville, will also give the group hearings on the robbery of the City Line Garage there.

Authorities say the prisoners admitted their part in the crimes. Those under arrest are:

Thomas Knapp, 20, of 748 Centre street, Trenton, arrested last month for stealing an automobile; Michael Kader, 17, of 152 Turpin street, Trenton, Malter Petrowsky, 22, of Melvin street, Morrisville, and Carl Lebendosky, 20, also of Morrisville.

Police declare all four were implicated in the hold-up of the tavern of Warren A. Quinn, 701 Cass street, Trenton, on the night of December 19, when more than $150 in cash and $40 worth of cigars were stolen. The bartender and 50 patrons were lined up against a wall and the four armed bandits escaped in a waiting automobile.

The same four are accused of having held up the store of young Knapp's uncle, John Knapp, Hobson avenue, Hamilton Township, last month and with stealing cash and merchandise. Police say young Knapp remained in the car while the other three did the actual robbing.

The third robbery which police say Knapp, Petrowsky and Lebendosky figured in was the holding up of William J. Mullen, Jr., son of Detective Sergeant William J. Mullen, of the Trenton police, on the night of October 1, as he drove on a road near Tullytown with a young woman companion. Police said the Mullen robbery netted the trio about $1,500, including cash, diamond rings and other articles. Much of the loot has been recovered and police expect to locate the remainder shortly. Young Kader did not figure in this felony, police declared.

The fourth crime charged against the group was the hold-up of Ralph Ford, 45, insurance agent, of Morrisville. Ford had just made some collections when the bandits took $300 and his automobile. The car was later recovered.

HOME QUESTIONS LOOM

How much of the New Deal is to be continued during President Roosevelt's second term? The President faces an accumulation of questions the action upon which will bear largely on the future.

From late in January to June 30, in a series, important emergency powers expire which were given him and under which much of the New Deal was created.

It is regarded as "slated" that his power will be extended both to continue the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and, up to 15 per cent, to devalue the dollar by reducing its gold content. The fund is being used to maintain the stability of the dollar in international exchange.

The powers to devalue and to maintain the stabilization fund expire Jan. 30. On the following day the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has made its loans to private industries, banks and businesses. We think it both assured and desirable that financial authority, held by the Administration essential to carrying on its fiscal policies, be promptly given.

It is much the same regarding the extension, needed by June, continuing Secretary of State Hull's powers to negotiate the reciprocal tariff treaties.

Another class of cases bears largely on Government costs and the balancing of the national budget. A new relief program and the continuance or discontinuance of a list of New Deal institutions, or their merger with each other or regular Government departments, are involved.

Assured of its prosperity, the Country will await thoughtfully the President's definition of the course he will seek to steer into the political and economic future. The nation hopes to see a restraint upon costs applied which will assure the attainment, within a year or so, of better than an even balance between the Nation's receipts and expenditures.

GASOLINE CONSUMPTION

The giant that was born when the oil industry started 80 years ago still grows. Its operations are among the best indices of the country's activity and prosperity.

Current figures, based on consumption for 10 months and estimates for two, show an increased use of gasoline this year over last year of 29,930,000 barrels. The barrel contains 42 U. S. gallons. In various ways, though chiefly in propelling land, water and air craft, over 1,500,000,000 more gallons were consumed. After allowing for exports and the usages for other purposes, it is probable that the millions of users of motor-driven vehicles and craft traversed some 10 billion more miles in 1936 than in 1935.

Higher prices prevailed for both crude oil and its products. A good year has been enjoyed by the industry, the figures show. The conditions in the oil world have become a principal factor affecting prosperity in general. The full extent of national dependence on gasoline is shown by the figure for the total consumption in 1936. It is 464,820,000 barrels.

An alarmed mother is assured by a Chicago medical publicist that all babies are born bow-legged. It is good that this is straightened out.

HOLLYWOOD—The year's boldest snatch of a Hollywood souvenir was accomplished the other night at the Trocadero and afforded much amusement to the few who realized what was going on. Joan Crawford was the victim. Toward the end of an evening of dancing, the star wanted to cool her tootsies, so she eased off her slippers. It was perhaps 30 minutes later when she reached out her toes to find them. They were gone. The embarrassed actress searched frantically, but no luck. An unidentified fan had snatched the slippers and Joan had to leave the swank night spot in her stocking feet.

Remember the taxicab, "Eloise" in "Seventh Heaven"? Well, Twentieth Century-Fox has dragged it out of storage and is using it again for the closeups in the new Simone Simon-James Stewart version. The vehicle is so ancient—it actually was used by the famous taxicab army that saved Paris—that the studio has rigged up a double for the action shots.

In case you are interested in what the stars gave each other for Christmas, Glenda Farrell presented Drew Ebersson with a typewriter and a radio. Tom Brown gave his mother a 200-piece set of silver flat service. His ma gave Tom a grand piano.

Though he likes Hollywood very much, Freddie Bartholomew has his moments of homesickness for England. Because of this, his Aunt Millicent is having the backyard of the family home at Westwood converted into a duplicate of the garden they used to have in Westminster, England.

Here and there in Hollywood... Starting downstairs for a midnight raid on the icebox, Mitchell Leisen did a brody and broke his little toe... Bob Burns has bought a second ranch in San Fernando valley. It's a 15-acre property, which makes his holdings 25 acres in all. He will build his house on the new location... Jean Arthur, poor gal, has to wear an evening gown in "History Is Made at Night" that contains 1,020,000 beads (they figured it out from the number of cartons used). The dress weighs 60 pounds, but is really a stunner. We saw it... The fans out Griffith park way must not be so sharp. Olivia de Havilland and her sister are there almost every Sunday, and they are never recognized... Latest celebrity to fall for the country life is Eugene Pallette. He's buying a ranch in Oregon and will stock it with cattle. Also in his plans is the erection of a hunting lodge. The portly comedian even plans to live there most of the time. All he wants out of Hollywood is three pictures a year... The Archie Mayors have moved into their new place in Beverly... And Connie Bennett believes in keeping up appearances, for she wired the servants to decorate the house in its full Christmas regalia. Connie, of course, is spending the holidays in New York.

Flash! Blasting another separation rumor, Dorothy Lamour flew to St. Paul New Year's morning to visit her husband, Herb Kay, who is working there with his orchestra. She took a carat-and-a-half diamond ring for Herb's Christmas present.

"LUXURY MODEL" by MAY CHRISTIE

SHE was tensely aware of his interest.

As the dark, good-looking man in the perfectly fitting suit passed and repassed her chair in the train that was carrying Elizabeth Harmon from college to her home, it was as though he had deliberately radiated her a message.

Why hesitate? Why not give him his cue? One was only young once, and he was terribly attractive.

But a certain innate breeding halted Elizabeth. The opportunity would come. She could not force it.

It came—in the burly form of the colored porter, musically bawling: "First call for lunch. Dining car rear."

She rose, heading for the restaurant. The good-looking man followed. He noted the long, lissom lines of her nineteen years, her exquisitely shapely ankles, and the pale gold coil of her hair on the nape of her white neck. It was a long time since he had touched a woman's hair. While he had been away, fashions had changed. Now, he was amazed at himself for imagining how that hair would look when loosened about her shoulders... the rippling cascade of it.

An attendant placed her at a table for two. The man seated himself opposite. So perfectly timed was this that almost it seemed an accident.

Because she was nervous, her voice was curt as she ordered her luncheon.

The man opposite her picked up a menu. Elizabeth made a quick survey of him.

He had a small head, with very straight black hair—"as black as a raven's wing," she thought romantically. Little feathery tufts of white above each ear lent him distinction. There were lines about his eyes that made him seem older than when seen from further off. They gave him a faint air of dissipation, or world weariness, which only added to his attraction, Elizabeth thought.

The waiter moved away. Elizabeth stared out of the window. She knew that the man opposite her was awaiting his opening. An embarrassed shyness seized her. Why hadn't she stayed in the pullman?

Suddenly the train swerved violently on a curve, and her handbag skidded off the table into the passage.

The man stooped to pick it up. He handed it back with a little bow to her "thank you."

She flushed, and loved herself for flushing. She was a lovely girl, with a small, slender face illumined by eyes as darkly blue as cornflowers. Her skin that had the texture and color of pale almond blossoms had deepened to a bright rose. The man remembered grimly that most of the women he had known were not given to blushing. As he looked at her there was a smouldering gleam in his dark eyes that sent little shivers all along her nerves, and her body tensed with excitement.

"It's really surprising that the trains stay on the tracks at all, with the new increase in speed," was what he remarked banally.

"Isn't it?" she smiled. She had a dimple in her left cheek that at the moment made her look extraordinarily childish. Couldn't be more than seventeen, he thought. Eighteen years' difference in their ages—though the past two years, which had been an eternity of hell, should be discounted.

"But I love speed. I wanted to fly down. But Dad wouldn't let me," she pouted.

"Is that so? I suppose it would be too bold of me—" he smiled at her—"if I said I was glad. I'm afraid he might take this amiss, he added quickly. "In another year or two we'll all be flying. It will be the principal means of locomotion. The Atlantic crossed in a few hours. Around the world in a few days."

"How perfectly gorgeous!" Her eyes shone. She drew a deep breath.

He thought: "She's longing for excitement, for adventure. Fresh from school, and just rarin' to go." He understood women. From the time he had been her own age, they had a fascination for him. Lovely Woman—and Money-making!

But money-making, of course, came first.

The waiter brought their orders. When they were alone again, the man picked up the thread of conversation.

"You like traveling?"

"I'm mad about it. My ideal of life would be to wake up in a different place every morning."

"With the right companion?" he ventured. "I've traveled considerably myself and one can get very lonesome, you know."

"Oh, I shouldn't. I should love the freedom. And of course one could pick and choose from the people one met," she said with youthful arrogance.

"Naturally."

"Everyone should travel. It's so broadening. I hate narrow-minded people. I just can't get on with them," she confessed. She speared a luscious bit of fried chicken, and, as though it were a symbol of fat smugness, bit into it with her strong young teeth.

"We think alike," said the man opposite her. As a matter of fact, he was thinking with much greater rapidity than she was. Had she pocket a morocco leather wallet with an entwined gold monogram on it, opened it and handed her a card.

She read:

GERALD BRUTON
BROKER

STOCKS BONDS INVESTMENTS

"Then you must be one of the Bruton family who have offices in Los Angeles?" she inquired eagerly. He nodded.

The Brutons were wealthy and important people, and she was impressed. But she had known from the beginning he was somebody. You could tell it from his appearance.

"What exactly does a broker do?" "I'm terribly ignorant."

"You buy and sell stocks for other people. I'm the trader of the firm."

She was tensely aware of his interest.

looked into his mind she would have been considerably startled.

"You know Los Angeles well?" he inquired casually.

She nodded. "My home's a few miles out of Hollywood. I've been away at college. A woman's college near San Francisco. I've just finished with it."

"And sorry? Or glad?"

Her beautiful eyes widened as she stared at him. "Would you be sorry if you'd been shut up behind gloomy walls, and then at last you got your freedom?" she demanded.

With a clatter, the fork with which the man had been prodding his salad fell to his plate and he bounced to the floor. When he had recovered it and apologized, he said: "Why, no! But perhaps I should feel some difficulty in remembering how to talk to a beautiful girl."

She laughed. Her laugh was like a freshet of delight. Like rippling water with Spring sunshine on it.

"Is that so important?"

"Immensely." The flame glinted again in his dark eyes as they met hers meaningfully. "Of course I might be boring her," he added, watching his effect. "But such are not my intentions."

A wave of excitement caught Elizabeth. This was fun. She felt daring, and unconsciously thrilled that romance was here before her on her very first day of freedom. She had been restless and unhappy her last year at school. Longing to spread her wings and roam the world. Hating restrictions. Avid for living.

Conventions were stupid. Of a generation that was gone. If you wanted a thing, in this gorgeous year of 1934, you went right after it and grabbed it, and more power to you.

"Won't you let me introduce myself, please?" He took from his vest

A trader is only a man who is quicker than the next one, who can outwit the other fellow. That's really all there is to it."

"But fair dealing, of course? I hate trickery."

He said, with a touch of arrogance: "Of course one plays square."

She sighed. "How fascinating! I wish I could be a trader too. I suppose you deal in millions?"

He nodded. "But money doesn't mean much," he deprecated.

"Good heavens! Are you crazy?" Her blue eyes were pools of astonishment.

"Well, most of one's satisfaction lies in succeeding. That's what I meant. You know—to accomplish things—amount to something—squaring oneself with oneself, as it were."

"Naturally. I understand." She added, on a little burst of enthusiasm: "I do so want a career of my own, and all the trimmings. I want to see everything in the world, be everywhere, do everything." She leaned forward confidentially.

"You know, it seems to me as if half the women in the world were suicides? Dead before they're properly alive. Or like ostriches with their heads in the sand. Blind to everything lovely and exciting."

"That sort is to be pitied," he agreed readily. He was studying her carefully, much intrigued by her beauty and youth. Her enthusiasm too. He thought it very engaging.

He suggested a liqueur. She hesitated. She had never tasted a liqueur before. But after all her talk, if she refused, he would probably think she had been posing, or that she was afraid of him.

So she accepted.

HAM is a HABIT with them.....

Many families go on eating the same round of familiar foods week after week, year after year. Of course, they get some variety—fresh fruits and vegetables in season—special side dishes now and then—a new cracker or cereal or relish or something like that.

But, it's all too easy, unless you watch out—to wonder what to have for dinner tonight and then fall back on habit by serving the same old things cooked the same old way.

It may take a little thought to get out of the rut—but really not too much. If you want to treat your family right, watch this newspaper for hints on new things to eat and new ways to fix the old favorites. For example, there are more than fifty different ways of serving ham.

And don't miss the advertisements. You'll find them full of news—about good foods at special prices, about new kinds of foods, about new ways to cook and serve. . . . It's so easy, after all, once you make up your mind to set a better table.

HIGH SCHOOL CAGE TEAM OPENS SEASON WITH 32-21 WIN OVER UPPER MORELAND

By Louis Tomlinson

Led by "Punk" Zefferi, the Bristol Bunnies got off to a flying start in the cage season as they conquered an old foe in Upper Moreland on the latter's court last night before a packed house 32-21.

For three periods both teams battled tooth and nail with the lead changing hands often, but in the final canto the Dougherty coached lads stepped out to tally 15 points and gain the decision. Before the deciding quarter began the visitors held the narrow margin of a one-point lead of 17-16. However with Punk Zefferi sticking them from all angles and with deadly accuracy, there was little doubt as to the outcome of the fray as they proceeded to put the game on ice.

In the last period Punk enjoyed a floor show of his own as he rolled up no less than six field goals and two foul throws for a total of 12 points. Previous to this he had already had nine points to his credit, thus giving him a total of 21 points for the evening or enough to beat the locals all by himself.

Nick Huffnell played a brilliant game at guard, showing a fine passing game and also an excellent game of guarding in holding his man scoreless from the floor.

The first two periods were slow. Upper Moreland stepped out to a 3-0 lead before the Bunnies got wise to them. Zefferi stuck a field and Hughes a foul goal to make it 3-3. However Upper Moreland again took a two-point lead only to have Charlie Hughes sink a field goal to tie the score again at 5-5 as the quarter ended.

In the second quarter Zefferi scored one of two foul shots, and later a field goal on a pass from Huffnell, making it 8-5 in Bristol's favor. Lakey shaved the leads a little with a foul goal, but Danny Dimidio nullified this with one of his own. The period ended with the Bunnies leading, 9-6.

The third period started out fast with Upper Moreland tying the score in short order. Patterson and Zefferi both scored goals, making it 11-8. Pierce scored under the net, and Ewers' foul goal knotted the count 11-11. Ewers followed up with another two-pointer, giving the locals the lead again. Huffnell and Patterson each tallied a foul throw, the latter's a technical, then Nick scored another free toss, followed by two fouls scored by Hughes. This gave the Cardinals a 15-14 lead. Pierce shot the locals out in front with a double-decker, only to have Zefferi stick one from the floor on a dribble in, putting the visitors in the lead once more as the period ended, 17-16.

The final canto was all Zefferi, who sank field goal after field goal, making six and a foul, for 13 points. Wilbur Van Lente scored the other field goal, while James counted two fouls and Lakey one with Pierce netting a twin pointer just before the game ended to give the losers their five last period points.

Bristol looked good in their victory displaying a fine passing game and general all-round good play on both the offence as well as the defence especially in view of the fact that they had no practices over the holidays due to the scarlet fever cases. On the other hand they were by far world beaters and must do even better if they expect to go very far in the Lower Bucks County Conference.
